The engine and other mechanical components are based on the Cavalier, but the bodywork has been redesigned for improved aerodynamics with a drag coefficient of only 0.26, lower than any other production fourseater in the world when it was introduced. This manual covers models with nonturbo petrol engines and frontwheeldrive. Turbo and fourwheel drive is available on certain other models. This was produced until 1995 and then discontinued. The 2.0 litre X20XE engine, introduced in 1994 as a replacement for the C20XE. All the engines are of wellproven design and, provided regular maintenance is carried out, are unlikely to give trouble. The body styles are all Coupe, and the DTM model introduced in 1995 is fitted with a rear spoiler and a lowered sports suspension. Fivespeed manual transmission is available on all models, and fourspeed automatic transmission is available as an option on C20XE and X20XE models. A wide range of standard and optional equipment is available within the Calibra range to suit most tastes. Safety features include a fullsize drivers airbag from 1993, and a passenger airbag from 1994. Antilock braking is fitted as standard to all models. For the home mechanic, the Calibra is a straightforward vehicle to maintain, and most of the items requiring frequent attention are easily accessible.

It was introduced to counter the Japanese sports coupes of that time. During its existence, Calibra was very popular in the European market and outsold its nearest rivals, however in the United Kingdom, it failed to outsell the Rover 200 Coupe, which offered comparable performance, but without 4WD in the top of the range models. It was known as the Opel Calibra in Europe, the Opel Calibra in the United Kingdom, the Chevrolet Calibra in South America, and the Holden Calibra in Australia and New Zealand.
